

COURSES

The courses and the clinic are meant to be the cornerstone of a future international joint master's program, building on pre-existing master's programs in international law in the three partner institutions.
Based on field studies and the intensive research of academic staff, courses will be tested and evaluated in intensive school programs, before being widely disseminated in the academic and economic world through a dedicated website, scientific publications, and free access to educational material produced.

» Global Environmental Litigation

»

Multilevel Governance of Natural Resources in the Arctic

» Arctic Indigenous Peoples Law

» Business and Natural Resources Rights